DISTINGUISHED SCHOLAR LECTURE

Wednesday, April 19, 2017

The myth, burden, and cost of being forever foreigner and a model minority

Richard M. Lee, Ph.D., LP

Registration: 5:00 – 5:30 p.m.
Program: 5:30 p.m. – 7:00 p.m.

Location: Weyerhaeuser Administrative Building
Macalester College
62 Macalester Street, St. Paul, MN 55105

About the Program:

This program qualifies for 1.5 continuing education credits.
In the racial landscape of the United States, Asian Americans are perceived as both the model minority and forever foreigner. These racial stereotypes result in both overt and subtle forms of discrimination. In this presentation, Dr. Lee will present a series of studies that examine these discriminatory experiences more commonly experienced by Asian Americans, the impact of discrimination on the psychological adjustment of Asian Americans, and moderators/mediators of the discrimination-adjustment link. He will conclude with a discussion of ways in which Asian Americans can respond and resist against these racial stereotypes and acts of discrimination.

Participants will be able to:

1. Describe types of discrimination commonly experienced by Asian Americans.
2. Explain how such discriminatory experiences impact psychological adjustment.
3. Identify psychological variables that help explain the link between discrimination and adjustment.

About the Presenter:

Richard M. Lee, Ph.D., is a Professor of Psychology and Asian American Studies at the University of Minnesota. He was born and raised in Connecticut. He is the youngest of three sons raised by immigrant parents from South Korea. He attended Simon's Rock College of Bard, Boston College (B.A.), and Virginia Commonwealth University (Ph.D. in Counseling Psychology), followed by a predoctoral internship and postdoctoral fellowship at the University of California, Davis. He previously taught at the University of Texas, Austin before moving to Minnesota in 2000.

Professor Lee is a fellow of APA Division 17 (Society of Counseling Psychology) and Division 45 (Society for the Psychological Study of Culture, Ethnicity and Race) and the Asian American Psychological Association. He is a founding member of the Asian Caucus of the Society for Research on Child Development and the Diversity Committee of the Society for Research on Adolescence. From 2011-2013, he served as President of the Asian American Psychological Association. He is the current Editor for Cultural Diversity and Ethnic Minority Psychology (2015-2019). His research has been funded by the National Institutes of Health and the National Science Foundation.

Please note: You must attend the full 1.5-hour program to receive continuing education credit.
